

Lone Wolf Announces New Document Management Module Powered by docSTAR

Lone Wolf announces availability of a new integrated and comprehensive Document Management module for their popular Lone Wolf Real Estate Brokerage Management System.

Cambridge, ON - June 22, 2007 - Lone Wolf Real Estate Technologies, a leading realty management software company, announces the availability of their new Document Management module that will provide real estate offices with a tightly integrated document management and imaging solution.

Lone Wolf's strategic direction is to offer document management and imaging as an "add on" component to their popular realty management software. Lone Wolf plans to offer 'Lone Wolf Document Management powered by docSTAR' as an optional module for availability in July of this year. The new offering, comprised of document management and imaging technology, will further enhance Real Estate office efficiency, reduce E&O risk, and provide 24x7 document accessibility to Agents in the field.

"The Lone Wolf Document Management Module represents the next step in docSTAR's strategic direction to provide real estate offices with best in class products and services," says Tom Franceski, President of docSTAR, "Lone Wolf has become the trusted financial management platform for many real estate offices." We've focused our efforts on providing best of breed products and services to help real estate offices grow; naturally we are thrilled that Lone Wolf chose our technology to be their integrated document management solution."

"With almost 3,200 real estate offices using our Lone Wolf suite of products, our goal is to continue to deliver enhancements that allow our clients to run their offices as efficiently as possible. We believe that document management is an important piece of the real estate operation." Said Lorne C. Wallace C.A., President of Lone Wolf.

July 2007 is the targeted release date for the Lone Wolf Document Management Module.
