

Lone Wolf Real Estate Technologies purchases Lucero Summit broker management software from MarketLinx

Lone Wolf Real Estate Technologies Inc., the largest supplier of real estate office management software in North America, announced today the purchase of the Lucero Summit real estate brokerage software from MarketLinx, a leading provider of information technology to the residential real estate industry and a member of The First American Corporation (NYSE: FAF) family of companies. The sale was effective September 1, 2009.

As part of this transaction, MarketLinx and Lone Wolf are also announcing a new Strategic Partnership that will provide for the seamless integration between both company's products. The integrated solution will ensure that MarketLinx and Lone Wolf customers will benefit from unparalleled productivity and out of the box integration.

"The acquisition of the Lucero Summit assets from MarketLinx will expand our presence to three products lines, Lone Wolf, DPN and Lucero, covering over 7,500 real estate offices across North America. This purchase supports our commitment to providing quality back office management solutions and confirms our belief in the future of real estate brokerage operations in this difficult market. We are looking forward to working with the current customer base on Lucero, expanding it in the future and benefitting from our strategic partnership with MarketLinx." said Lorne C. Wallace C.A., President of Lone Wolf. "With the establishment of this customer base, we can develop the next generation of real estate brokerage software and create a solid infrastructure standard for the industry."

"Integrating MarketLinx's front-office solutions, such as AgentAchieve and Document Manager, with Lone Wolf's back-office solutions will enhance our common clients' user experience and productivity," said Ben Graboske, chief executive officer of MarketLinx. "The integration of Lucero within the Lone Wolf Real Estate Technologies suite of products will better align each company's product offerings and market focus."
